

Toms is such a great brand, and I love how they gift a pair of shoes every time someone purchases a pair of Toms. My children are all obsessed with Sesame Street, so these Cookie Monster shoes are very much on my wish list.

Sesame Street X TOMS, £32, toms.co.uk

I am outside pretty much all this month; I planted lots of seeds a few months ago with the children and we are reaping the rewards. The funniest thing is that the ones my two year old planted have done the best. He managed to create a whole meadow garden with just one rogue throw. I love teaching my children from an early age about growing fruits and vegetables, and there is nothing quite like the look on their faces when they finally get to eat tomatoes off the vine or pull a sweet carrot from the ground. Happy summertime, all!

This backpack from Pink Lining makes a genius nappy bag. I love its parrot design, and it's super light, with loads of pockets and pouches, a detachable insulated bottle holder and a padded changing mat. Wonder Bag Backpack, £65, pinklining.com

Leo's LITTLE LUXURIES

OUR COLUMNIST
Leonora Bamford SHARES HER
FAVOURITE THINGS THIS MONTH

WHERE TO GO

My little one is too big for baby carriers now, but my friends have been trying out CARiFIT classes in Battersea, which are, effectively, a 30-minute baby-wearing workout! You get to enrol in a safe postnatal workout whilst wearing your baby.

carifit.co.uk

PHOTOGRAPHY: HELENE SANDBERG

I'm always looking for good newborn gifts and this Little Brown Box is right on trend with brands like Baby Mori, organic cotton rattles and wooden teething toys.

The Mini Collection, £44.99, littlebrownbox.co.uk